

Deacon's Beacons

September 11, 2019

This is the day that the LORD has made;
let us rejoice and be glad in it. Psalm 118:24

Any other day, this might seem more appropriate. But today we commemorate a sad event in which evil triumphed, at least temporarily. Over 3000 people lost their lives that day. Some were victims; others were heroes that chose to put them selves in harm's way for the sake of others. But the result that followed showed true American character. We were all concerned about the other. We came together in prayer. What is a shame is that it took such a drastic event to do that. Maybe if it really was a way of life for us, things would be different. Maybe the hate that has seemed to multiply in recent years would fade away. Maybe if we care about one another and pray for and with one another, we really can change the world.

Go raibh síocháin Chríost a bheith in éineacht leat.
